St. Michael

Taking at St. Mary's Catholic Church's new addition in Sleepy Eye, Minn. Look new statues of St. Michael on the left, and St. Richard below. Don't they look angelic! Actually the statues designated for those areas have not arrived as of yet, so Mike and Rick took advantage of the situation.

Remember When by Mom

Alphonse knew we'd have to have a bigger farm if we were going to raise our family the way we wanted to, so the last couple of years we lived at the Morton farm we were looking for a bigger farm that had to have a big house and a big barn.

Sometimes I went along, or else a real estate agent would show the farm. We looked at farms near Sanborn, Lambertton, Springfield, Vesta, Osakis, Benson, Bird Island, Hector, Waterville, Henderson, Gibbon, LaFayette and Essig. One day we went looking at farms with real estate agent, Otto Kolb, from New Ulm. He was an older guy very friendly, very knowledgable. He had several farms to show. We looked at the 400 acre farm that Clem Bezdeckek eventually bought. Coincidence that Dan and Arlene farmed that farm for many years. He showed us the William Dempsey farm northeast of Sleepy Eye, 367 acres with a big house and a big barn. He said the owner was, "iffy," about selling, but he'd keep in contact with us. Mr. Kolb had a noon meal with some men at the Dakota Hotel every day, and William Dempsey was one of the group, so from time to time he'd write us, or call us to come. Maybe that was the day Mr. Dempsey would do business. We kept that as our, "dream farm," in our minds for a couple of years.

We also had another farm in mind, the Ralph Streise farm by Benson, 520 acres with a huge barn, cemented cow yard, very modern, but the house had a new kitchen, bedroom, bathroom addition on one side with a flat top. We'd have to finish building an upstairs addition on top of that, and expand the upstairs. It was possible.

In the meantime we kept paying off our 160 acres till it was free and clear. We were ready for business.

It just so happened both of these farms became available at the same time. Mr. Dempsey who was an older gentleman, a lawyer from New Ulm, passed away in the New Ulm hospital, and his heirs, sons, were going to sell the farm by Sleepy Eye. The Streise farm was ready to be sold. It was St. Mary's Catholic School in Sleepy Eye that was the "winner." Alphonse had gone to catholic school in Morgan, and he wanted a Catholic education for our children.

We worked with a Prudential agent out of Marshall, Mn. And we were able to mortgage our Morton farm, and the Sleepy Eye farm, and get enough to make the final payment to buy our, "dream farm." In June of 1965 we made the earnest money payment with closing scheduled for March 1st of 1966.

We kept an eye on our, "dream farm," that summer. It was a late spring, so much rain, crops weren't planted in that area until the middle of June. At our Morton farm we had a normal growing season with a good crop of corn and beans.

Marv and Bernice Goldschmidt were renting the place, and they found a farm to move to. Same neighborhood that Doug and Connie Goblirsch live in now.

Remember When Continued

Alphonse started hauling ear corn with our big truck to the Sleepy Eye farm. Marv said he could use the wooden corn crib, as he wasn't going to be using it. We could even use his elevator. Alphonse bought a tractor, and Dan also brought a tractor, the big, "80 John Deere," to plow small grain fields. When they started plowing the neighbors decided to meet those guys, so Ethelbert Schmid and Ramey Strate, were at the field one day, and Herb Olsen another day. They had to see what that big, "80" would do. The neighbors said the earth just shook with that big tractor.

One day as Alphonse was crossing Highway 4 and 29, the brakes went out on the truck, and he was so lucky that no one was coming, as he could not stop.

That fall we put in a new septic system. We planned on adding two more bathrooms, one on the main floor, and one in the basement, and doing laundry in the basement so a bigger system, and a deeper system was necessary, and that was also tiled. This was hooked up and ready to go.

The corn was planted so late, so it was late by the time it was harvested, so we weren't able to do any tillage on the cornfields. This was because of all the rain in the spring.

We had been driving in Birch Coulee Park by Morton one summer when Alphonse saw this pasture close by, creek running through. Bill and Warren Pitts lived on the farm. Bill was a widower, and Warren was his son. When Alphonse asked them if they would be willing to rent the pasture to him to put some cattle on it, they thought it a good idea, and said they'd even take care of the cattle. For a couple of years, we sold the cattle right off the grass. Then Bill said he'd fill his silo if Alphonse wanted him to take care of finishing the cattle. So, Yes, Alphonse bought his corn field, and filled the silo.

1966 came along, and we sold the cattle. The roads were already posted so a semi was waiting at the, "Y" at Morton, and hauled the cattle to the semi. When those cattle were sold, that check paid off our operating loan. Now we just had to worry about our mortgage.

We never know when our angels come along. Another angel we had was Joe Eischen, a retired carpenter, from Morton who helped us remodel, add on, tear down or build new on the farm. Joe and his wife, Christine, would come and play cards. They'd love to out bid each other, so it made for good times playing cards.

March 01, 1966, was coming soon. On that day we signed papers, gave up our checks from Prudential and, became owners of our Sleepy Eye farm. We drove into the driveway, and realized now we are the owners. Marv Goldschmidt, and his family were ready to leave with trucks and trailers. They would be back for the cows later.
